Workshops

1. Your “Right to Participate” in hazard investigations and how to establish workplace strategies to fix problems (introductory)

This workshop will deal with the role of a health and safety representative or an employee member on a joint health and safety committee in workplace inspections and investigations. The fundamental “Right to Participate” as well as the “Right to Refuse” dangerous work will be explored using case studies (e.g. asbestos) which emphasize the importance of worker involvement in workplace investigations. The role of government inspectors, and involvement by outside parties who may have technical expertise, will be discussed. Participants will also discuss strategies for documenting health and safety concerns, making recommendations, ways to effectively communicate with the employer and share their experiences on workplace investigations and the right to refuse situations.

2. Managing Workplace Stress and Overload

As employers pull back resources, they expect workers to do more with less. This workshop will discuss how we can mobilize and try to change a workplace culture that ignores the damaging impact of excessive stress and unreasonable workloads. Participants will discuss the cause and effects of overwork, and strategies to overcome the ever increasing workload that is not just impacting our health at work, but the relationship we have outside of work.

3. Strategies for Preventing Workplace Violence (including Domestic Violence)

This workshop will provide an overview of the expanding concept of workplace violence (physical violence, psychological violence, bullying, harassment and domestic violence). Strategies to respond to situations involving violence in their workplaces, new recourses, differences and similarities between jurisdictions will be discussed. Participants will explore what local unions can do to protect members from and assist members affected by all forms of violence.

Focus Group

Delegates will participate in a focus group that explores timely issues including impairment at work, cannabis, opiates, medical use, medical monitoring. Participants will be able to respond to these issues as they arise in the workplace (e.g. employer policies and practices), as well as, how health and safety protections intersect with human rights and privacy rights.
